

The Lens Rite

CONstriction · TRAUMA INVENTORY · THE VIEW FROM OUTSIDE

"The power I have now is the same I had then, and the same I'll have when."

TONIGHT'S ENTRY POINT

Waxing Gibbous

~75% illuminated · Station 4 of 8 · "Wipe the Lens (I)"

This isn't a fix. It's an accounting. Eight stations, one lunation, one honest look at what's actually constricting you — the limits you built yourself, and the ones that got put on you without asking.

Begin wherever the moon actually is tonight. The cycle doesn't care where you enter. It only cares whether you ride it all the way around, back to the same dark, on the other side of the thing.

The aim isn't transformation into someone new. It's recovery of someone accurate — more activated, less inundated, humbled but not humiliated, accountable but not all-faulted.

01 — Work it in one sitting, or across the real eight nights. Either is correct.

02 — Write directly in the fields below. They save to this device as you go.

03 — Skip nothing at the bruise station. That's the one doing the actual work.

STATION 01 · NEW MOON · 0% ILLUMINATED

BIOPSY

The Intake

Before anything is visible, take the smallest true sample of what's constricting you. One incident. One belief. One name, if there's a name. Don't diagnose it yet — just extract it and set it aside where the light will eventually reach it.

What is the specific shape of my constriction right now?

Where did I first agree to make myself smaller?

YOUR ACCOUNTING

Name the sample. Just the sample — no verdict yet.

STATION 02 · WAXING CRESCENT · ~25% ILLUMINATED

CULTURE

Let It Sit

Don't act on the sample yet. Watch what grows from it over a few days of ordinary light — journal it, voice-note it, whatever gets it out of your head. The culture tells you whether the thing is infection or immune response.

Is this actually still active, or am I keeping it alive out of habit?

YOUR ACCOUNTING

What grew? What turned out to be nothing?

SCOOP THE BRUISE

The Trauma Inventory

This is the maloik station — the evil eye, the psychic residue, the attention you never asked for and never fully metabolized. Name every instance where you suspect your energy was taken, drained, envied, or targeted. Real or imagined doesn't matter for this pass. This isn't about assigning permanent blame outward — it's about locating what was never organically yours, so you can stop performing someone else's poison as your own personality.

What do I carry that I never actually agreed to carry?

Whose eye do I still feel on me?

What would I release if I were certain it was never mine to hold?

YOUR ACCOUNTING

List it plainly. Nobody's grading the accuracy of this one.

STATION 04 · WAXING GIBBOUS · ~75% ILLUMINATED · BEGIN HERE

WIPE THE LENS (I)

Clearing Toward Sight

Physically clean something that represents your seeing — mirror, glasses, a screen, the altar. As you do it, name one distortion you're ready to stop mistaking for reality. You're not fully clear yet. You're just removing what's obviously smudge before the peak arrives.

What have I been calling “the way things are” that's actually just smudge?

YOUR ACCOUNTING

Name the distortion you're setting down.

STATION 05 · FULL MOON · 100% ILLUMINATED

VIEW FROM OUTSIDE

The Whole Life, At Once

Stand somewhere you can see your whole living space, or close your eyes and see your whole life, all at once. Describe it in the third person, past tense, like a file already closed. What did they build. What did they survive. What did they get right that they never gave themselves credit for.

If I were reading this life as someone else's file, what would I actually conclude about their character?

Where's the gap between that conclusion and the one I make about myself?

YOUR ACCOUNTING

Write the file. Third person. Past tense.

STATION 06 · WANING GIBBOUS · ~75% ILLUMINATED

FLUSH THE COBWEBS

The Release Begins

Flush something, literally — water, breath, an actual cleaning. Say out loud what you're no longer maintaining. Cobwebs are architecture nobody's using anymore. Take it down before it starts looking like structure.

What structure am I still dusting that no longer holds anything?

YOUR ACCOUNTING

Say what you're done maintaining.

STATION 07 · LAST QUARTER · 50% ILLUMINATED

RESTRAT & RESTRETCH

Rebuild the Structure

Half dark, half light — the balance station. Write the one adjusted strategy that comes out of everything surfaced this cycle. Not a whole life plan, just the smallest recalibration to the specific constriction you named at the new moon. Then physically stretch whatever's been holding the tension — jaw, hands, chest, whatever it actually is.

Given everything I've seen this cycle, what's the smallest structural change that actually holds?

YOUR ACCOUNTING

The one adjusted strategy. Keep it small enough to actually do.

REMEMBER & SELECTIVELY FORGET

The Composting

Decide, deliberately, what from this cycle becomes working knowledge and what gets released as no-longer-useful memory. Write both lists. Burn, delete, or physically discard the forget list. Keep the remember list somewhere you'll actually see it again.

What do I want to still know a year from now?

What am I finally allowed to stop rehearsing?

YOUR ACCOUNTING

Two lists: remember, forget. Then act on the second one.

